Project summary

The target group of the project are such families, who are struggling with some financial problem, for example, unemployed parents or more precisely, the children who are in need of some assistance in education and their unemployed parents. Job opportunities, trainings and children's education may have a great effect on the improvement of social conditions with the help of the complex model of social enterprise in Drljan. The project activities have two main methodological pillars: education and the power of the community.

The most important part of the project is education that determines the efficiency and the sustainability of the project in large extent. We are using various educational methods in the project such as lexical courses, soft skills trainings, awareness raising events and study trips. In line with the agricultural lexical courses there will be a practice in the built foil tents in Dr-ljan. The lexical courses will be held by professionals specialised in the field of agriculture. We are using a non-formal educational method where the participants can practice how to grow vegetables in the built foil tents (Learning by doing method).

Apart from these courses there will be soft skills trainings in the following topics: time management, entrepreneurship development skills, work ethic routine and self-knowledge. With the development of these basic skills they can become successful in their jobs, even after a long-term unemployment. The entrepreneurship development skills help the participants to become economic entrepreneurs and to freely overtake businesses after the aforementioned project (risk assessment, investments and savings etc).

The second methodological pillar is the power of the community, because it means a unique action and self-development source. With this complex approach we provide a ground for the initiation of agricultural activities, while its sustainability is ensured by the massive effect and the dissemination of positive examples within the community.
